Circuit Local Rule 11(c) states that unpublished orders, judgments, and explanatory memoranda may not be cited as precedents, but counsel may refer to unpublished dispositions when the binding or preclusive effect of the disposition, rather than its quality as precedent, is relevant. Roderick C. HAAS, Appellant, v. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, et al. No. 89-5124, United States Court of Appeals, District of Columbia Circuit, Sept. 20, 1991. Rehearing Denied Nov. 15, 1991. Before HARRY T. EDWARDS, SILBERMAN and STEPHEN F. WILLIAMS, Circuit Judges. ORDER PER CURIAM. 1 Upon consideration of the court's order to show cause and the reasons for the court's order, it is 2 ORDERED that the order to show cause be discharged. It is 3 FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk is directed to withhold issuance of the mandate herein until seven days after disposition of any timely petition for rehearing. See D.C.Cir.Rule 15. San Francisco has passed a law that would create a database of websites that infringe copyright. The "Right to Be Forgotten" legislation would be a database of websites that host or link to copyright infringing material, and would require such sites to remove the information after three months. Sites with "illegal" content could be sued for US$150,000 a day in addition to the legal fees that copyright owners can demand. The law makes no explicit reference to the Internet, but some web experts are worried that the law could be used to censor websites. The law has been introduced by the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, and if it passes in the coming weeks, it will be sent to the state legislature for review. The law would also allow local San Francisco police to submit notices to tech companies in an attempt to identify those who steal content. San Francisco is just the latest in a string of cities that are looking to create a digital copyright police force. Earlier this week, 82157476af
